(a) The purpose for which the supply is to be given is electric traction.

(b) System of Distribution.—Three-phase current at a pressure of 6,600 volts to be transmitted at a frequency of 25 cycles per second from the Power Station of the applicants located on the Lower Circular Road, Calcutta, to a sub-station located in Howrah by means of special duplicate 3-core high tension cables laid underground. In the sub-station the high tension alternating current will be transformed to continuous current at a pressure of 550 volts by means of static transformers and rotary convertors. This continuous current will be distributed to various points along the system by means of underground cables, where they will feed into the overhead trolley wires from which the Motor Cars will derive the necessary current.

(c) Both the high tension transmission mains and the low tension distributing mains will be laid in earthenware troughings filled with pitch, and in the case of the former a separate trough will be provided for each. Duplicate high tension submarine cables will be laid under the Hooghly River to join the Calcutta mains with those of Howrah.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT OF THE SANITARY COMMISSIONER, BENGAL, FOR THE YEAR 1904.

MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT—SANITATION.

Darjeeling, the 17th June 1905.

RESOLUTION—No. 1186T.—M.

READ—

*The Report of the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal, for the year 1904.

MAJOR CLARKSON, I.M.S., was in charge of the office of Sanitary Commissioner throughout the year, but the report is written by Major Clemesha, I.M.S., who took over charge shortly after its close.

Climatic conditions.

2. Although the rainfall of the year was above the average, it was not well distributed, and the monsoon rains ceased much sooner than usual. This rendered the last quarter of the year very unhealthy. The prices of food-grains were on the whole lower than in the previous year.

Births.

3. The number of births registered was the highest on record, viz., 3,170,440, or 42·6 per thousand of the population of the Province according to the last census, excluding two small tracts where vital occurrences are not yet registered. The increase, as compared with 1903, is attributed by the Sanitary Commissioner to the circumstance that the latter year was more healthy than 1902 and, in particular, that malaria was much less prevalent. This explanation may be accepted as accounting for the greater part of the increase. Some small portion of it may perhaps be due to the progressive improvement in registration, but the reporting of births and deaths has now reached such a degree of accuracy that this factor has become of comparatively small account. In his note on the age tables of the last census, Mr. Hardy calculated that the mean birth-rate in Bengal during the decade 1891—1901 was 43·9 per mille, which is only 1·3 more than that now reported. The officers of the Vaccination Department enquired into nearly half a million vital occurrences during the year and found that less than 1 per cent. had been omitted from the returns compiled at the police-stations. There are considerable variations in the figures reported from different parts of the Province; and whereas in the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions the reported birth-rate was less than 40 per mille, that of Chota Nagpur, with its healthy climate and prolific aboriginal population, approximated very closely on 50. The highest rate recorded in any district was that of Hazaribagh, which exceeded 56 per mille.

Deaths.

4. The total number of deaths reported was 2,415,423, or 32·4 per mille, compared with 33·3 per mille in 1903 and 33·4 in 1902. The diminution occurred chiefly under the head of cholera. The healthiest Division was Chota Nagpur with a death-rate of only 22·9 per mille. In the Burdwan, Orissa and Chittagong Divisions it was under 30; but in the Rajshahi, Patna and Presidency Divisions it exceeded 35 per mille. The vital statistics of towns will be dealt with in the Resolution on Municipal Administration. In discussing the seasonal incidence of mortality, the Sanitary Commissioner points out that the conditions of the different sub-Provinces are far from uniform. In Bengal Proper the healhiest months are June and July; in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, January and February; and in Orissa, September and October.

Infant mortality.

5. There was a further reduction in the rate of infant mortality, which was 187 per thousand births. This figure is still 55 per mille above the average of England and Wales, but it is not very much in excess of that in some of the mining and manufacturing counties. The Sanitary Commissioner summarizes in his report the result of the enquiries instituted by his predecessor regarding the causes of death of infants under one year of age. He considers that the bulk of the deaths result from illnesses due to improper food, insufficient clothing and other causes arising from the ignorance of the parents. The influence of malaria is also well marked; and while in some of the healthier districts, such as Singhbhum, Manbhum and the Sonthal Parganas, the infantile mortality is as low as, or lower than, the mean for England and Wales, in unhealthy districts like Jalpaiguri and Dinajpur it is from 30 to 40 per cent. above the Provincial average. In Captain Rogers's report on fever in Dinajpur, which will be referred to again further on, it is shown that of the mortality recorded under "Fever" in a thousand cases specially enquired into, no less than one-tenth were cases of infants "born feeble," and were due largely to the mothers having suffered from repeated attacks of malaria during pregnancy. The Lieutenant Governor doubts whether sufficient weight is given by the Sanitary Commissioner to the injurious effects of premature marriage and child-bearing. It has been found in Europe that the vitality of infants is greatest where the age of the mother is about 24 years, and that there is a marked rise in the mortality where her age is less than 20 years. Unskilful midwifery is responsible for a larger mortality than would appear from the number of still-births reported; the people have a prejudice against reporting still-births, and in such cases generally allege that the child was born alive and died a few days later. The Sanitary Commissioner is preparing a leaflet in Bengali and Hindi containing a few simple rules bearing on the rearing and care of children; and it is hoped that some good will result from its distribution—at least in Calcutta and some of the larger towns. The returns show that about 105 males are born to every 100 females; but the mortality amongst male infants is so much greater than amongst female, that about half of this excess has already disappeared by the end of the first year of life. These results have their counterpart in Europe, but there the greater relative vitality of female infants is even more marked than it is in this country, where sons are so highly prized and are often more carefully tended than daughters.

6. The mortality from cholera was barely two-thirds that of 1903. The number of deaths registered was 137,701, or 1·85 per mille. In Bengal Proper cholera was more prevalent, especially in the eastern districts; but elsewhere there was a general improvement. This was most noticeable in the Patna Division, which had suffered severely in 1903, when the death-rates recorded in the Champaran and Shahabad districts were, respectively, 7·7 and 6·1 per mille. In no district has the mortality during 1904 approached these figures. The comparative immunity of Puri is highly satisfactory, and may perhaps be attributed to improved sanitary arrangements, especially as regards the water-supply. Only once in the last 20 years has Puri been so free from this disease as in 1904. Anti-cholera inoculation of coolies emigrating to Assam has recently been discontinued at the instance of the Chief Commissioner of that Province, who considered that the measure had not been of material effect in warding off the disease, while it tended to make emigration to Assam unpopular.

Cholera

7. After three years of unusual prevalence there was a fall in the mortality from small pox, which, in the Province as a whole, was only 0·23 per mille. The death rate from this cause was highest in Jalpaiguri, where it was six times the Provincial average, while two of the three districts of Orissa, which usually suffer most, enjoyed comparative immunity. The Lieutenant-Governor has under his consideration proposals for reorganizing the Vaccination Department, and in particular for improving the status of the superior staff whose duty it is to see that the vaccinations reported have been effectively carried out.

Small-pox.

8. Plague first assumed serious dimensions in Bengal in 1900 when the number of deaths reported was 38,412. In 1901 this figure was more than doubled, but in the following year the mortality fell to 32,967; it rose to 65,680 in 1903 and in the year under review to 75,436. Nearly three-quarters of the total mortality in 1904 occurred in three districts—Patna, Shahabad and Saran—and more than one-third of it in Patna alone, where the plague death-rate stood at no less than 16 per mille. Outside eight districts of Bihar and the City of Calcutta, only 545 deaths from plague were reported; but in those districts the disease seems to have established itself firmly; and it has spread since the close of the year to Howrah. It is essentially a disease of crowded sites; and although nineteen-twentieths of the population live in rural areas, nearly one third of the plague mortality occurred in towns. The Sanitary Commissioner draws attention to the fact that 135 females died of plague to every 100 males, and attributes this circumstance to the fact that plague is a disease of the house, and attacks chiefly those who are most confined to it. The epidemic followed its usual course. It reached its climax in March, then rapidly declined until July, rose again in August, fell off in September and October, and once more rose steadily with the advent of the cold weather. The number of deaths from plague reported by the Sanitary Commissioner differs from that furnished in their weekly diaries by district officers who obtain their information through a slightly different agency. Orders are under issue providing for a comparison, month by month, of the two sets of returns, so that the differences between them may be ascertained and reconciled. It is sometimes said that many plague deaths are returned as due to fever, but this seems unlikely having regard to the fact that the mortality under this head is no greater than it used to be in the districts where plague is rife.

Plague.

9. The preventive measures consisted chiefly of disinfection and the evacuation of infected houses. Inoculation is still viewed with suspicion, and makes but little progress. No mention is made in the report of rat destruction. This is now recognized as of great value, and it has been urged upon the Municipal authorities of Patna and other towns where plague has taken a firm hold. The measures to be adopted for dealing with plague were considered in October 1904, at a Conference convened by the Lieutenant-Governor for the purpose, and the existing orders on the subject were passed in review. On the advice of this Conference the penal provisions of the plague regulations which had been issued under the Epidemic Diseases Act were abrogated; revised instructions were drawn up in which special emphasis was laid on the absolute importance of working with the people and of avoiding the least appearance of interfering with their rooted prejudices; and funds were placed at the disposal of Commissioners for expenditure on plague prevention and relief.

Fever.

10. No less than 1,655,198 deaths, or more than two-thirds of the total number, are attributed to "fever." The reporting agency is notoriously unfit to form an accurate diagnosis, and all but a few well-known diseases, such as cholera and small-pox, are classed indiscriminately under this head. Some light is thrown on the extent to which this occurs by Captain Rogers's researches in Dinajpur, from which it appears that, out of 1,000 reported deaths from fever, enquiry showed that more than one-fifth were really due to pneumonia, one-tenth to diarrhœa, one-ninth to phthisis, one-sixteenth to dysentery and one-fifth to other causes; while less than one-third were attributable to malarial fever. It must however be remembered that, even where malaria is not the immediate cause of death, it is frequently a predisposing cause, by weakening the constitution and rendering it unable to resist other diseases, particularly those of the respiratory system. According to the returns, the number of deaths from fever was about the same as in the previous year; but it would appear from more reliable sources of information that fever was really more prevalent during 1904; there was a considerable rise in the proportion of "fever" cases treated in the public dispensaries, and also in the number of admissions to the Police hospitals of constables suffering from malaria. The "fever" death-rate varies greatly in different parts of the Province; and whereas in Orissa it is only 12 and in Chota Nagpur 16 per mille, it rises to 24 in the Presidency and to 32 per mille in the Rajshahi Division. The highest rate reported is 38 per mille in Dinajpur. This district has long been exceedingly unhealthy; and accordingly, early in 1904, Captain Rogers was deputed to carry out the investigation, already alluded to, in that district and in Purnea. In the course of his enquiries he discovered that a large number of cases, hitherto regarded as of malarial origin, are in reality caused or complicated by a parasite of a different kind from that which produces malarial fever. It is not yet possible to say what will be the practical result of this discovery; but it can hardly fail to yield scientific results of great value.

The prevalence of malaria is now known to depend largely on the amount of stagnant water in bils and moribund rivers, which affords a breeding ground for the anopheles mosquito. The Lieutenant-Governor has recently sanctioned a project for draining an area of 290 square miles in the 24-Parganas at an estimated cost of Rs. 17,39,000; and two similar schemes in the Rajshahi and Pabna districts are under preparation. Much, however, can be done by less ambitious measures, such as the filling up of hollows, the clearing of drains, and the treating of stagnant pools with kerosine oil. The report shows what action was taken in this direction during 1904. Attention was concentrated mainly on certain jails; and it is stated that the result was "an appreciable decrease in the incidence of fever in them." The Sanitary Commissioner is preparing a note for the guidance of Municipalities describing the most practical methods of warding off malaria.

11. Great stress was laid by Captain Rogers on the value of quinine as a prophylactic; and it is satisfactory to observe that there was a considerable increase during the year in the sale of pice-packets, each of which now contains seven grains of quinine. Steps are being taken to increase the facilities for distribution by multiplying the number of depôts for the sale of these packets.

Dysentery and Diarrhœa.

12. The reported deaths from dysentery and diarrhœa numbered only 47,875, but Captain Rogers found that in the cases tested by him in Dinajpur only a very small part of the actual mortality from these diseases was correctly returned. There are often unaccountable variations in the figures for adjoining districts; and whereas in Dinajpur the recorded mortality under this head was only ·03 per mille, in Jalpaiguri it was ·70. The Sanitary Commissioner is arranging to enquire into these discrepancies. The same unreliability attaches to the return of respiratory diseases, which is of no value whatever.

And respiratory diseases.

13. It has recently been arranged that station-masters shall report vital occurrences within railway limits, but the returns in some cases are clearly incomplete. It is for instance highly improbable that no births or deaths should have occurred during the year on railway premises in the districts of Shahabad and Singhbhum.

Vital statistics within railway limits.

14. Mention has already been made of three important drainage schemes which will shortly be carried out and of the measures taken in certain places to get rid of mosquitoes. In paragraph 62 of his report the Sanitary Commissioner enumerates some other important works which were carried out during the year. Much was done towards improving the water-supply by the construction of new tanks and wells and the cleansing of old ones. Progress was also made in improving the conservancy arrangements in towns; but the difficulties connected with the installation of septic tanks, which were mentioned in the Resolution on the Report for 1903, have not yet been wholly solved. An exhaustive enquiry was made by the Committee appointed to investigate the matter, and certain definite conclusions were arrived at, but a final settlement of the question must await the result of enquiries which are now being made for the purpose of ascertaining whether the effluent from the tanks can be bacteriologically purified by filtration through sand.

Sanitary improvements.

15. The report submitted by the Sanitary Board contains an account of the numerous water-supply and drainage projects which have engaged their attention during the year. To the former class belong the schemes for water-supply at Puri, Pabna, Khulna and Barisal. But the most interesting feature of the report is the evidence which it gives of the activity displayed by many Municipalities in Bengal in the preparation of drainage schemes. Reference is made to no fewer than fourteen such schemes; and many others are in contemplation. When these projects have been finally prepared and approved they will be carried out gradually as funds are available; and in this way it will be possible to secure that the Municipal money is expended to the best advantage. The detailed plans and estimates for the drainage of Puri and several other towns were prepared by an Assistant Engineer of the Public Works Department; but his services were available only for a limited time; and much still remains to be done. It is most important that these projects should be drawn up under closer expert supervision than the Sanitary Engineer has time to devote to them; and it has recently been proposed to give him an assistant for this purpose.

E. A. GAIT,

Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL, AND OF THE METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN ASSAM, FOR THE MONTH OF MAY 1905.

THE month of May, though characterised by high pressure, low temperature and rainfall above the ordinary, was on the whole more normal than its predecessors. The distribution of pressure was virtually of the normal type, though for the greater part of the month the gradient was steeper than usual. It is to this latter feature that the high south-easterly winds which prevailed during the month were due, and these winds were in turn the cause of the unusual prevalence of thunderstorms, which not only accounted for the increased rainfall, but also for the diminished temperature. Though the type of weather here indicated maintained itself with considerable constancy during the first half and again during the latter days of the month, there was an interval between the 14th and the 25th, when the weather was of a different character. During this period owing to a change in the distribution of pressure west hot and south-west winds extended into Lower Bengal, rainfall practically ceased, and temperature rose above the normal.

At the beginning of the month pressure was in slight excess, while temperature was nearly normal. The distribution, however, commenced almost immediately to assume the character indicated above, and pressure began to rise, while the showery weather which set in from the east and north of the province gradually extended westwards, bringing with it a general reduction of temperature Rainy weather continued almost without intermission, more particularly over Lower Bengal, up to the 14th of the month, conditions being especially unsettled on the 8th and 9th, on the latter of which dates a small depression was shown over South-West Bengal. Pressure during this period underwent only small and unimportant fluctuations and remained above the normal, while mean temperature, as has been already indicated, was low throughout the province

On the 14th a change in the distribution set in leading to altered weather conditions during the succeeding days of the month. On the 14th a small shallow depression was shewn at the head of the Bay. It was in itself of no importance and was merely an indication of the change in pressure distribution which was taking place at the time. This change, which was accompanied by a slowly falling barometer, resulted in the gradual diffusion of westerly winds over Lower Bengal and Assam with a corresponding rise in temperature. On the 18th pressure was for the first time below the normal throughout the province, while temperature except in Orissa and West Bengal was similarly for the first time in general excess The distribution had on the 18th shewed a tendency to revert to its former type, but about the same time a new factor came into operation which helped to perpetuate the slightly abnormal weather in the province. On the 18th or 19th weather had become unsettled in the Andaman sea, and by the 20th a small cyclonic storm had formed somewhat to the north-east of Port Blair. On the evening of the 20th it crossed the Burma coast slightly to the east of Diamond Island, and moving in a northerly direction passed out again into the Bay of Bengal early on the next morning. During the succeeding 24 hours it moved parallel to the Arakan coast, and finally striking the land near Akyab on the morning of the 22nd broke up in Upper Burma. It brought no rain to Bengal, but so far affected the weather that it diverted the winds from their normal directions, giving them a light and variable character. This change in the winds was accompanied by a further rise in temperature in all but the extreme western districts, where the pressure continued falling owing to the proximity of the storm

With the disappearance of the storm pressure rose rapidly, but it was not till the 25th that the weather fully recovered its normal character. On that date pressure was once more in excess throughout the province, and the mean temperature for the day differed but little from the normal. Throughout the whole of this period, from the 14th to the 24th, rain had held off from almost the whole province, but on the 25th showers again became fairly general and well distributed.

During the last days of the month, as had already been pointed out, weather was of the ordinary type with, however, something more than the normal rainfall.

Pressure was as we have seen in excess for the first seventeen days of the month; from the 17th to the 25th it was below the normal, while during the latter days of the month, though it fluctuated slightly, it was for the most part high. The average for the month was consequently above the normal, the excess being below $\frac{1}{20}$th of an inch except over a considerable portion of East and North Bengal, where it slightly exceeded that amount.

Temperature was consistently low during the first half of the month, and was likewise either normal or below normal from the 25th to the 31st: during the rest of the month there was slight excess. The average mean for the month is hence below normal throughout the province, the defect being less than 5° except for a small area in East Bihar, where it was slightly greater The deficiency is more marked in day than in night temperatures, for the latter of which the average in the extreme east of the province was normal. Rainfall was altogether absent from the province during the period extending from the 14th to the 24th, but for the remainder of the month it was more plentiful than usual, especially in the eastern half. Notwithstanding, therefore, the prolonged dry period in the latter half of the month, the total is above the average for all the divisions except Orissa, in which the amount of precipitation was slightly deficient. The largest excess was in North Bengal, where it amounted to about 35 per cent.

The following table gives full data for comparison of the actual and normal rainfall of the month of May for all districts of the Province. The figures are derived from the average and actual rainfall of the rain-reporting stations in each district. The first column gives the normal or average district rainfall as determined from the observations of past years. The second column gives the actual district rainfall as determined from the actual rainfall of the month at the reporting stations in each district. The third column expresses the ratio of the actual district rainfall of the past month to the normal rainfall as a percentage. The fourth column gives the same information as the third in a slightly different form, stating as a percentage how much the district rainfall of the month varied in excess or defect from the normal:—

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. Rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT ON EMIGRATION FROM THE PORT OF CALCUTTA TO BRITISH AND FOREIGN COLONIES IN THE YEAR 1904.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT—EMIGRATION.

Darjeeling, the 19th June 1905.

RESOLUTION—No. 1014T.—G.

READ—

The Annual Report on Emigration from the Port of Calcutta to British and Foreign Colonies in the year 1904.

The most important administrative measures of the year 1904 were (a) the passing of an amending Act (XII of 1904) to provide for the levy of fees under section 108, and the extension of the application of Chapter XIV of the Indian Emigration Act, 1883 (XXI of 1883), and (b) the incorporation in the statutory rules of special provisions calculated to prevent the spread of tuberculosis among emigrants during voyages on boardship.

2. Six emigration agencies were at work during the year, of which five represented British colonies. The total number of emigrants registered was 10,286. As in previous years, recruitment was most active in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, from which 72·92 per cent. of the emigrants came, the districts furnishing the largest numbers being Fyzabad and Basti. Of the persons admitted into sub-depôts, 1,213 were rejected on the spot as unfit to emigrate. The number of these rejections was thus larger than in the previous year; and this probably indicates that greater care is being exercised in medical inspection in the districts. Eight thousand seven hundred and thirty-four persons were admitted to the Calcutta depôts. This number was further reduced by the rejection of 648 as unfit, by desertion, by transfer to other agencies, by release, and in other ways to 7,451, of whom 7,135 were shipped during the year and 316 were left in the depôts for subsequent despatch. These figures show a decided falling off as compared with the figures for 1903, when 11,161 persons were accommodated in the Calcutta depôts and 9,084 were actually embarked for the colonies.

3. The demand for labour also decreased, only 7,501 emigrants being requisitioned as against 9,893 in the previous year. The supply is shown as 6,901; but, if the 1,030 emigrants who were supplied in 1904 to meet the requisitions of 1903 be deducted from this figure, the result is a total deficit of 1,630, as against the deficit of 1,099 shown for the preceding year. This further shortage is attributed to the prevalence of plague, the good harvests of the two previous years, and the increased demand for local labour. The colonies which received the largest number of emigrants were Natal (1,638) and Mauritius (1,404). No labour was demanded by, or supplied to, Jamaica.

4. The decrease in the number of emigrants has produced a corresponding effect on the Emigration Fund. In 1903 this fund showed receipts of Rs. 31,189, an expenditure of Rs. 25,862, and a closing balance of Rs. 5,327. The receipts during the year 1904 were Rs. 19,590 and the expenditure was Rs. 29,451. The balance has thus been converted into a deficit of Rs. 9,860, due to the falling off by Rs. 10,041 in the fees realized for emigrants embarked.

5. During the year 4,377 immigrants left the colonies and returned to India, bringing with them savings amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 7,64,327, or, on an average, to Rs. 174 a head, as compared with Rs. 166 returned for the year immediately preceding. Only 691 adults (i.e., 15·78 of the total) are said to have returned without any accumulations.

6. The thanks of the Lieutenant-Governor are due to Dr. Banks, who held the office of Protector of Emigrants throughout the year, for his careful administration and report.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H. W. C. CARNDUFF,

J. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. Rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.
